Recreational Fee Survey

Recreational Fee Survey

Summary

1. The City of Huntington Park does not have a resident / non-resident rate. This might be something they want to consider in the future, as their facilities and programs continue to be impacted by non-residents.

The City of Bell, which is adjacent to Huntington Park, has a resident / non-resident fee.

The non-resident rate is approximately $10 more on most class fees and $160 on their basketball program. One of the reasons cities have a resident / non-resident rate is to help keep program numbers down, which helps to keep the facilities in better shape for resident use.

2. In 8 of the 46 classes that were offered by Huntington Park, the class per session cost was slightly higher than the average per class session of the other 11 cities surveyed. The cost differential was generally between $0.59 to $1.00. In one class (the Aerobics for Adults), Huntington Park was $2.44 higher than the average cost per session of the 11 cities surveyed.
3. In 35 other class comparisons, they were lower than the average cost per class session for the 11 other cities surveyed. The differential for that was from $0.23 to $3.31.

The Youth Tennis Program was $3.31 per session less than other communities. With the resurfacing of the Tennis Courts this year, the City may want to look at increasing this class fee.
